Comacell Brown Jr.

Comacell Brown, best known as Cell Spitfire, is a multi-talented artist, painter, graphic designer and entrepreneur from Annapolis, Maryland.

Born in the mid 80's to Comacell A. Brown, Sr and Terri Wilkerson of Annapolis, Cell received little to no love from his father, who initially denied him. The love from his mother began to dwindle as time progressed. Due to an ongoing drug addiction, Comacell's mother Terri gave her parents guardianship of her only son. By the age of 8, "Cell" became very aware of his mother's battles and began to channel his frustration into art. His new found passion for drawing and painting was discovered and cultivated at an after school program provided through the Salvation Army. He later began to manifest his love for art on clothing. Using t-shirts and jeans as his new canvas, Cell created customized clothing pieces for recreation. As attention grew over the adoration of his wardrobe creations, Cell began to make shirts for family, friends, and those who contacted him via referral.

At age 18, he and his comrades decided to embark on a business venture with his custom clothing line. This line would be later called Creative Fashions. Initially all abstract art designs were created thru time-consuming painting on the clothing. Later, for mass production, they implemented fancy machines and computers and created quality printed shirts. This turned Cell into a local icon and aspiring entrepreneur and has brought him an increase in finances and publicity.

Celebrities with Spitfire's designs include Lamar Jackson, Pat The Roc, 50 Cent, Jadakiss, Angela Davis, Young Jeezy, Cam Newton, Amara La Negra, Young Dylan, FUBU Frames, PNB Rock, Kane Beatz, and more.

Ursula Cain-Jordan

I am an African-American mixed media artist. In honor of those who came before me, I named my art business after my great grand-mother Eliza Jane Johnson. The inspiration for my art comes from relationships, politics and culture. My art is figurative and abstract, symbolic and realistic.

My goal is to draw the viewer into a conversation about the art. I hope that you will find something that touches your heart as you view my art.

Lisa McKnight

Lisa finds her inspiration in matters connected to nature. Her paintings and drawings strive to portray the details of her subjects and, through that detail, to both capture the personality of the subject and to motivate the viewer to see and appreciate those details that make each subject unique. Her watercolor paintings are mounted on acid free foamboard and are treated to seal them – so they may be hung without a frame or may be framed like an oil painting (i.e., without glass) thus eliminating potential glare. Lisa lives in Annapolis, MD.

Glory Paredes

Glory Paredes is a Maryland artist originally from Nueva Concepción, El Salvador.

"It's not easy to leave your country or your family. Through painting, I'm able to escape and forget that I sometimes feel like a stranger here. Art fills me with happiness and purpose. It's something that has helped me identify who I am and has taught me that every human being has something to offer and has a purpose, we're not just our jobs."

April M. Rimp

April Rimp's goal is to tell stories of life, people, and places using color and light to establish an emotional response and tell the story of the place.

She uses watercolor, fluid acrylic or casein in her work, sometimes incorporating mixed media techniques. Her goal is for others to recall stories of their own, so she abstracts portions of the painting to allow the viewer to insert their own story. Rimp has achieved Signature Artist status in 7 watercolor societies, the International Society of Acrylic Painters, and the International Society of Experimental Artist. She has had work published in 3 books and one Special Edition of the Best in Watercolor magazine presented by Artists Magazine.

John Wider

John Wider is a resident of Edgewater, Maryland. Watercolor painting is a passion that has no end for him. His painting interests are quite varied, as you can see on his website www.watercolorbyjjw.com. Many are from photos from his travels and some are from wonderful photographer friends of his. His style is somewhat unique for watercolor painting, as it has more structure and a sense of solidness to it than many other traditional watercolor artists.

John accepts requests for commissioned projects. Contact: 410-274-4431 or johnwider@msn.com
